

Lightning NIC or L-NIC [?]: a very low latency fast-path into the heart of a CPU core, placing packets directly into the register file and eliminating overheads due to PCIe, MMUs, and memory and cache accesses.

